School of Cadet Command

Dear Student:

Welcome to United States Army Cadet Command and the School of Cadet Command! Our mission is to commission the future officer leadership of the U.S. Army and motivate young people to be better citizens. The experience, expertise, and knowledge you possess will benefit your cadets, the university, and this command. You will find the School to be demanding, with a program of instruction designed to help you get a "running start" in your Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) assignment.

Highly qualified officers and noncommissioned officers teach the course and will provide you with the benefit of their experiences at the battalion level. Other Cadet Command staff members supplement the instruction. I consider your graduation from this qualification course to be a prerequisite for successful service with Cadet Command.

Congratulations on your assignment and welcome to Cadet Command! I am sure you will find your assignment in Cadet Command as challenging as it is rewarding. The staff and I look forward to seeing you at Fort Monroe and providing you the resources you will need to prepare the Army's future leaders.

Sincerely,

Stewart W. Wallace
Major General, U.S. Army
Commanding
